

Edo Kiriko is designated as the traditional handcrafts of the Metropolis of Tokyo and also the country, Japan. It is said to have started back in 1834, when Kyubei Kagaya of glass shop in Edo Odenmachi sculpted on glass surface. Cut is very detailed, and finish is clear and brilliant. The patterns used in our collections are some of the most standard Japanese patterns. They are fine art with traditional and detailed craftsman's technique that has been inherited continuously for a very long time.

The specifications and price of the products may change without notice in advance. Please be noted that all products are hand made, and thus there may be slight size and/or color variation, and may contain small bubbles.

There is beauty that suits Japanese people

Kiriko suits people of

… all ages, I guess

I met a couple at a bar.

They're chatting cheerfully.

I pricked up my ears and heard the girl's voice.

"This glass is cute, it's pretty!"

"It's called Edo Kiriko" I whispered to myself.

"Do they all have the same patterns?"

"No, they don't" I whispered to myself again.

I started to get frustrated.

Then, the bartender said,

"It's a very traditional glass, going back to the Edo Period.

But it suits you well too even though you're young"
